

CONSPIRACY CHARGE
MADE AGAINST THAW
BY JEROME FACTION

EXTRADITION FROM NEW HAMP-SHIRE SOUGHT WITH DETER-MINATION BY NEW YORK
STATE AUTHOR-ITIES.

HEAR CASE ON FRIDAY

Arraignment Before Police Justice Takes Place Late Today and Adjournment Follows.

Thaw Asks for Extra Guards.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Cohasset, N. H., Sept. 11.—Counsel working for and against his return to the asylum agreed not to arraign him before a police magistrate until 4 p. m., and then to adjourn the case until tomorrow. He is charged with conspiracy with others to bring about his escape from Matteawan and it is upon this charge that William Travers Jerome will seek his extradition.

It was announced shortly after eleven o'clock that counsel had agreed to postpone the hearing until 4 p. m.
Justice Carr acquiesced in this arrangement. A crowd followed Thaw to the barber shop and pressed noses against the shop window while he was being shaved this morning. Sheriff Drew stood beside him. Thaw was in gay humor and spoke laughingly of his trip yesterday.

Arraignment Delayed.
Thaw's arraignment in police court was delayed. Jerome was waiting for his detective aide, Lanyon, due on a 10:30 train. "We are also waiting for the New York gunmen," he said with a smile. After being shaved Thaw returned to his room and talked with his lawyers.

Harry Kendall Thaw, thrown out of the Dominion of Canada yesterday and arrested near here after a fifty mile flight in an auto, arose late this morning after spending the night in a hotel room here under guard. Lawyers kept him up until a late hour laying plans to resist extradition to New York.

In another part of the hotel William Travers Jerome, denuded by the state to get the fugitive back to Matteawan, conferred with Thaw's
most recent captor, Sheriff Holman Drew, over the court procedure to be followed today. Mr. Jerome, accompanied by Deputy Attorney General Franklin Kennedy of New York, reached town last night on a special train. He had no supper so he chose as his conference room the kitchen of the Monadnock House, where he ate and discussed the situation.

Charged With Conspiracy.
At first merely detained, Thaw was afterward arrested on a complaint charging him with conspiracy in connection with his escape from the asylum and it was upon this charge that he was to be arraigned today before Justice James T. Carr in police court. New York was prepared to ask that he be remanded pending the return of the extradition warrant.

The Thaw lawyers yesterday took preliminary steps to swear out a writ of habeas corpus in the prisoner's behalf. It was said this morning that they might not press this further and that, like the Canadian counsel who tried hard to keep Thaw in the Sherbrooke jail, they considered their client safer as a prisoner than at large. If freed again Thaw might be seized by John Lanyon, a private detective who has been working with Jerome, and hustled across to the New York state line as a lunatic. Lanyon was due to arrive here today.

Jerome is indignant.
"We had no inkling of it," said Jerome today. "To say the least it was a high-handed piece of work. It was neither fair to Thaw, lunatic, nor to the state of New York. Moreover, it upset the principles of justice based on the habeas corpus act, and it is not doubt that it will result in more or less a scandal in Canada."

Mr. Kennedy was more emphatic.
"It was contemptible and cowardly,"
he said. "If those who put Thaw across the border thought they were giving him a high break in making him down with no American officers in sight, they failed to look at the other side of the case. Here was Thaw, a lunatic, turned loose with only the clothes on his back, short of funds and with no means of transportation. He was a man who had been miserably treated by a newspaper man.
Thaw is not a sane man. That has been proven again and again. This made it most pitiable. It was a terrible thing."

Thaw Demands Guard.
Thaw retired before midnight and far from objecting to the presence of Deputy Sheriff Burley H. Kelsey, insisted that other guards too, sit near the door. Two armed men, however, in rocking chairs just outside the room. The door was left ajar and a light was kept burning in the hall all night.

Thaw was fearful of what he called strong arm work. After his experience at Coaticook yesterday nothing would surprise him. Jerome's presence filled him with terror. "The unwelcome taste of liberty yesterday with its incident thrills and responsibilities left him trusting entirely in counsel and making feeble suggestions.

Thaw, himself, does not know, except in one case, the identity of the three men who caused him to be set down over the line at Norton Mills.
The man who he does know is Agent
Parkinson, chief of the dominion secret service, and it was at Parkinson's head Thaw hurled the heavy glass tumbler.

The hotel corridors here had the appearance of a convention assembly this forenoon. The Monadnock House lobby, headquarters for the pro-Thaw and anti-Thaw forces, were crowded.

CHICAGO BANK CLERK
ROBBED BY BANDITS

Daring Daylight Robbery by Four Men Who Secure Nearly $5,000 in Currency.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Chicago, Sept. 11.—Four daring robbers today seized a satchel containing $4,800 in currency and $10,000 in checks from Warrington McAvoy, 18 years old, a messenger of the Garfield Park State Savings bank, and escaped by driving away in an automobile. The robbery occurred on the sidewalk in front of the bank at West Madison street and North 40th avenue. The bandits accomplished the hold-up without the display of a revolver.

McAvoy had stepped out of the door of the institution with the money and checks in a small satchel and was waiting for a street car. He was to take the deposits down town to place it in a bank. McAvoy had been waiting only a few minutes when an auto containing four men drove up. Two of the men jumped out, walked over to where the bank messenger was standing and then one stepped behind him and touched him on the shoulder. When McAvoy turned his head the second robber seized the satchel containing the checks and was driven away.

MAYOR GAYNOR DIES
ON STEAMER BALTIC
CROSSING ATLANTIC

WORD OF HIS DEATH JUST BE-FORE REACHING QUEENS-TOWN RECEIVED AT
NEW YORK TODAY.

EFFECT ON CAMPAIGN

Removes One of Most Formidable Candidates in Coming Mayoralty Contest—Had Record As Foe
of Tammany Corruption.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

New York, Sept. 11.—Mayor Gaynor died on the steamer Baltic in mid-ocean at one o'clock on Wednesday afternoon receiving a cablegram received here today from Rufus W.
Gaynor, his son. News of his death was received here in a message sent by wireless and cable to Robert W.
Adams, his secretary, by Rufus W.
Gaynor, his son, who sailed with him.
The message read as follows:
"Father died Wednesday at one o'clock due to heart failure. Notify mother."

Gaynor sailed away from New York a last falling man, on the morning of September 10. An hour before he sailed but one man, his secretary, knew of his plans outside the city. He was expected to attack Tammany Hall and his immediate family.
The mayor's announced purpose was a brief vacation on the ocean. He felt that the tonic effect of the salt air would restore him in some measure to health.

The Baltic was due at Queens town today. The mayor died as she was nearing the other side. News of his death was sent by wireless to Cuxhaven and relayed to New York by cable.

In Midst of Campaign.
Mayor Gaynor left New York at a time when the city was settling in one of the strangest municipal political campaigns in its history. The day on the city hall steps he was notified that the independent political organizations that they had chosen him as their standard bearer in the campaign for mayor. A through that crowded city hall packed assembly to hear him accept. He had prepared a speech of acceptance, but was so weak he was unable to deliver it and his secretary read it for him, the mayor standing beside him.

Before the mayor sailed his secretary issued a statement denying reports of the mayor's serious illness.
The recent attack of the old throat trouble was due to the wound inflicted on August 19, 1910 by James J. Gal-agher, just as he was about to leave this city for a brief vacation.

Planned Fight on Tammany.
Mayor Gaynor expected to return from Europe fully recuperated and ready to enter the campaign with his old-time vigor. Before leaving he spoke of his condition as follows:
"I have been nearly four years mayor and have not yet had any vacation. I suppose almost everybody will concede that I am a worn-out man. I have been laid up a few days with one of the sharp attacks I occasional have from my mishap of a few years ago, but I am now over it and hope I will never have another."

He was expected to attack Tammany Hall sharply, politically. Soon as he returned to the city, before his departure he issued a characteristic statement leveled at Tammany Hall leaders and other political opponents in which he referred to them as "miserable scamps" and asserted that they are seeking his "mortal assassination."

The bullet that lodged in his throat
three years ago had never been removed. It was expected that he would remain abroad for less than a week.
He expected to sail for New York from Liverpool on September 18th and to reach this city a week later.

Reverses Situation.
Mayor Gaynor's death completely overturned the municipal political situation. It removes from the field a candidate for mayor who was expected to cut heavily into the votes of the fusion nominee, John Purroy Mitchell, and leave only the support nominated by the democrats and the fusionists. The former is headed by Edward E. McCall, chairman of the public service commission of this district.

The mayor's nomination was brought about by no particular political faction or party but represented only his personal popularity. Politicians who discussed his death today recognized the fact that his death made no attempt to nominate a candidate in his place. No other places on the Gaynor ticket have yet been filled.

Mayor Gaynor was placed at the head of the independent ticket after Tammany Hall had refused him a re-nomination. He was to lead those

HOLD A CONFERENCE
ON TARIFF MEASURE

Disputed Points Are Carefully Gone
Over—Previous to Session of Conference Committee of Both Houses.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Washington, Sept. 11.—Representative Underwood and Senator Simmons had a long conference with President Wilson today over disputed points in the tariff bill to be discussed by the conference committee of both houses.
It was said they went into detail on features of the income tax.

The president arranged to leave at 5:35 p. m. today for Cornish, N. H., the summer capital.

The tariff bill was sent by the house today to conference where it will be finally shaped for the senate to occupy among the laws of the land, but not without a struggle in which the democrats found it necessary to make a special rule over the progressives in order to disagree to the senate amendment.

The first meeting of the conference took place late today. It was announced that the democratic members of the conference committee would meet alone excluding the republicans until they had agreed upon all points in dispute between the senate and house. The republican minority would then be called in.

RACE DEGENERATING

were unable to marry in Monroe county because of the vacancy in the county clerk's office, they could get no license, the county board held a special session late night and after a number of ballots elected Ole Jackson

all parts of the county most of them came together for this purpose.

Immediately following the adjourn-

HANGED FOR MURDER
OF SCHOOL TEACHER
WHO REPULSED HIM

Omer Davis, Eighteen Year Old
Arkansas Youth Goes to Death on Scaffold—Respite is Denied.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Fayetteville, Ark., Sept. 11.—Omer Davis, 18 years old, was hanged today for the murder of Miss Nellie Moneyham, his school teacher. He went to the scaffold protesting his innocence.

"Meet me in heaven," were his last words as he assisted the deputy sheriff in adjusting the noose.

Davis' mother, who had walked many miles through northwestern Arkansas circulating a petition asking Governor Hayes to commute her son's sentence to life imprisonment, remained with the condemned boy until midnight. When the sentence was carried out she was outside the scaffold enclosure. She swooned when she heard the trap spring.

In her work of circulating the petition the mother was opposed by her husband and many of her friends.
She persisted, and about visited hundreds of homes carrying her infant son in her arms. After she had obtained several hundred signatures to the petition it was stolen from her in the night.

Miss Moneyham, 26 years old, was shot and killed by Davis February 2nd last, after she had announced her engagement to wed. Davis had fallen in love with the young woman while attending her school, in a frenzy of jealousy he shot her when she left.

He was sentenced originally to hang a month ago. Following his conviction it was stated that the court stenographer, a young woman had become mentally deranged while listening to the testimony and was unable to transcribe her stenographic notes. This defense, counsel said, blundered in perfecting an appeal.

On this ground Governor Hayes
granted Davis a thirty days' respite.
A denial that the stenographer had become mentally unsound has since been made.

Clinton, Sept. 11.—Martin Anderson returned Monday from a business trip to Minnesota.

F. C. McAfee entertained an aunt the first of the week.

George L. Woodard and wife spent Tuesday in Chicago.

William O. Wright and Dr. Rhoads of Beloit were here yesterday on business.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Gardener are arranging to sell their farm and move to town. Whether they will move to Clinton or some other place has not been decided yet. The condition of Mr. Gardener's health and schooling for the children made the move necessary. Their many friends hope they will decide to make Clinton their permanent home.

On account of a break in the machinery at the very beginning of the program last night at the Lyric theatre, it was necessary to close down and refund the admission fee. The management certainly have had bad luck since opening here.

Mr. and Mrs. Kuute Helland of Beloit were here yesterday on business relative to the transfer of the farm they sold last year to Otto Stromm which in turn he has recently sold to J. W. Wiman.

John Walsh returned Monday from his vacation at Madeline Island where his family have been spending the summer. He reports the fruit crop in the northern part of the state as inauspicious.

Stewart G. Lake and wife returned yesterday noon from their trip to the Yellowstone National park and other western places. They were gone just seven weeks.

WALKER CURRENCY PLAN SUBMITTED TO WILSON.

Well Known Editor Offers Substitute For Complex Currency Systems.

John Brisbane Walker, formerly chairman of the Colorado state monetary commission and whose reputation as editor and publisher is nation wide in character, has submitted a plan dealing with the currency problem to President Wilson which is far simpler than any of the many blithely offered to the administration for consideration. In a letter to the president, under date of July 26, 1913, now made public for the first time, Mr. Walker points out that the plan was previously presented as a substitute for the Aldrich bill in 1911. He adds that it would be "certain in its operation, quick of action, infallible and requiring no political pull."

Here is the plan as embodied in Mr. Walker's letter to President Wilson:

"First.—Subject all commercial paper accepted by the banks to a double inspection, first by the government and then by the clearing house, and stamp 'O. K.' if so found.

"Second.—Permit any banker who finds danger of unexpected withdrawals to go to the nearest sub-treasury to be established at convenient points throughout the country—and upon presentation of his inspected and stamped commercial paper obtain from the government currency amounting to 50 per cent of the face value of the paper so presented.

"The banker's visit need not be known to the public, his right to the currency could not be questioned, there would be no political influence required, and the government's security would be absolute. A high rate of interest would prevent undue inflation.

"If this plan appeals to you I will be glad to send a report prepared upon the subject while acting as chairman of the Colorado state monetary commission. But if it seems to you obscure or unworkable I will feel obliged if you will so state in your answer, that I may be able to lay stress upon any points which may seem weak or doubtful."

WOMAN IS GAME WARDEN.

Mrs. Gibboney of Alabama Not Afraid to Arrest Lawbreakers.

Mrs. Norma F. Gibboney of Aloha, Ala., is the only woman game warden in the United States. Living near Mobile bay, she has always been fond of outdoor life and is expert in the use of the rifle and shotgun. Her friends were not surprised when Governor O'Neal appointed her a state game warden, which gives her authority to make arrests. Speaking of her new place, she said:

"While I am not fond of publicity about most of my affairs, I am not averse to having it known that I am deeply in earnest about protecting the birds. I have been shocked to find how rapidly the birds are disappearing right here in my own neighborhood.

"I wanted to do something to stop the wanton slaughter, and if possible, give them an opportunity to come back to their old haunts. An ardent sportsman, a friend of mine, suggested that I could do this most effectively by being appointed a game warden.

"Having ample leisure and a good saddle horse, I decided that I would do what I could if appointed to stop the pothunters and the game boys from slaughtering our birds. I have made two arrests already and am ready to make more if it is necessary."

SCIENTISTS SEEK NEW GAS.

A New Ballooning Era Forecasted if Search Is Successful.

Leading London scientists, including Sir William Ramsay, are making an endeavor to produce on earth the new gas coronium, the weight of which is one-sixteenth that of hydrogen, whose presence in the sun was definitely established at the time of the last eclipse.

The successful production of coronium would revolutionize the science of aerostatics. The new gas would take the place of hydrogen in balloons, according to scientists.

MAYOR GAYNOR DIES CROSSING ATLANTIC

who opposed the regular democratic organization and were yet unwilling to join the fusion of republicans and progressives.

Furthered Subway Plan. His standard was the shovel reminding voters of his efforts to hasten the building of the new subway. The mayor also said it was emblematic of his intention to "clean the grafters out."

The passing of Mayor Gaynor recalls the sudden death of Henry George of single tax fame and a third party candidate almost on the eve of the New York election for mayor sixteen years ago.

Mayor Gaynor's death recalls the attempt on his life made by an assassin at Hoboken in August of 1910. On this occasion the mayor had decided to take a brief vacation abroad under much the same circumstances as those under which he left here a week ago. He was standing on the deck of the steamer Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse talking with friends and the center of a group of city officials at the time. Into this friendly gathering James J. Gallagher, the would-be assassin, made his way unobtrusively. When close to the mayor he drew a revolver and fired a shot. The bullet penetrated Mr. Gaynor's throat.

Wound Caused Trouble. He suffered from this serious injury for many weeks, but finally recovered to a sufficient degree to enable him to resume his duties and was apparently none the worse for his experience until recently when the wound began to trouble him again.

Gallagher had been dismissed from the dock department of the city of New York under Mayor Gaynor and had repeatedly endeavored to induce the mayor to reinstate him for his crime. He was sentenced to twelve years' imprisonment. After a little more than a year in prison he was transferred to the New Jersey hospital for the insane at Trenton, N. J., where he died last February.

The Probable Cause. Lacking details of the manner of the mayor's death his friends here believe that the heart attack spoken of in Rufus Gaynor's cablegram was brought on by a return of the coughing fit that had recurred at intervals since he was shot. Although the mayor had no presentiment that his trip would end fatally he had, at different times within the past year, told his secretary that the violence of these attacks were a great strain on his heart and he feared that at some time or other one of them might result seriously.

The mayor used to speak of the irritation in his throat as a "fish hook." It was this fish hook that probably caused his death. Just before he received news of his nomination by the popular vote in the election at the city hall the mayor had been in bed off and on for about a week at his summer home at St. James.

Murphy Is Shocked. Charles F. Murphy, of Tammany Hall whom Mayor Gaynor just before sailing had scathingly denounced as chief of the forces opposing him had this to say upon learning of the mayor's death:

"I was very much shocked. I knew he went away a very sick man. I deeply regret his death."

Adolph L. Kline who will be acting mayor of New York until January 1, is a resident of Brooklyn and a republican.

A Foe to Corruption. William Jay Gaynor was born at Whiteside, New York, in 1851. He was educated at Whitestown seminary and later at Boston. In 1876 he went to Brooklyn and engaged in journalistic work while pursuing the study of law. In 1878 he was admitted to the bar and became known and feared as a foe to corruption in public life.

He gained national reputation by effective work in breaking up "rings" within the democratic party, of which part he was an adherent, and by the part he took in securing the conviction of a notorious and powerful democratic boss for election frauds.

He served the state of New York on the supreme court bench, being elected in 1893 on nomination of republicans and independent democrats. His term expired in 1907. He also has a reputation as a writer of legal subjects.

Elected Mayor in 1909. After repeatedly declining to be a candidate for mayor and for governor, Judge Gaynor was in 1909 elected mayor of New York city on the democratic ticket, defeating Otto H. Bannard, republican, and William R. Hearst, independent.

In 1910 an attempt was made on his life by a discontented former employee of the city, who shot him in the head while he was about to embark at Hoboken, N. J., on a trip to Europe. Although seriously wounded he recovered and resumed his official duties.

During his administration, Mayor Gaynor aimed to secure economy and efficiency in all departments, and to this end reorganized the police department of Greater New York.

Chicago and Northwestern.

The statement of employees reported killed or injured on the Chicago and Northwestern railroad shows that during the month of July there were eight killed and six hundred and seventy-seven injured. The train service class of workmen had the largest number of fatalities and injuries there being four killed in this division and one hundred and thirty-four injured. Two trackmen were killed and one hundred and fifty-six of them injured. Out of the entire number of eight deaths, three of them were due to the carelessness of the party killed and nearly half of those injured have themselves to blame by not heeding the warning issued by the safety committee. In the switching service one man was killed and fifty-seven injured and one brakeman met his death through the carelessness of a fellow worker. Only seventeen brakemen were injured throughout the month on the system.

Notice has been received that the station of Friendship, on the branch line from Wyeville to Easton and Milwaukee, hereafter be known as Adams to comply with the postoffice name.

New danger signals have been erected at the crossing of the Beloit road and the tracks near the yard. The signs are painted a conspicuous red on a white background. The words, Stop, Look and Listen, are plainly visible a long distance from the crossing.

According to the Railroad Age Gazette, the car surpluses and shortages by groups from May 9, 1912 to August 15, 1913, was 69,253 cars, on August 1, 1913, 69,716 and on August 15, 58,623 cars. This being a decrease of 443 cars. At present the freight agents are finding no trouble to obtain cars enough to meet the demand of the shippers but as soon as the grain and coal shipments begin in their height more trouble will probably result.

The Grand Trunk railroad has adopted safety first rules similar to those of the Northwestern railroad, and officials have been assigned on lecture tours to educate the men to practice responsibility for accidents.

The count, though quite old and many times a grandfather, insists on fighting every time his honor is attacked.

Christy Mathewson is getting old. His arm is weaker than of yore, his eyes are not what they were, he is slower in fielding his position—but he keeps on winning just the same. Mathewson is not as young as he once was, and he shows it. But he continues to win. And the reason he has lasted so long is that he doped out a system of pitching that would fool the batter and yet not wear himself out. He has conserved his remarkable pitching resources. A wonderful nut has been more to Matty than his speed, curves and control and the chances are that when he's so old they have to wheel him out of the box, he will still be able to win games by hitting some young fellow to throw the ball for him, telling him how.

Eddy Murphy, the speedy outfielder with the Athletics, has had a very interesting career. At one time, years ago, Eddy lived near Shiloh park and was one of the kids around the ball field. Occasionally in batting practice young Murphy would chase the flies about and he looked like a ball player. To Connie Mack, so Connie took him in hand and sent him to Villanova college. After he had graduated he was placed with Scranton in the New York State league, and next year went to Baltimore. A season at Baltimore made him ripe for fast company and Connie put him to work with the Athletics. All of which shows us that besides knowing the goods when he sees it, even in the embryo, Connie Mack is also a mighty fine old top.

Walter Johnson is able to work hard at the baseball business through the summer time because he works hard at the farming business.

THIRTY CANDIDATES OUT FOR PRACTICE

Football Prospects at High School Not Disheartening as Line Will Have Big Men.

Plenty of football brains is the condition of the squad out for the Janesville high school eleven for out of the thirty candidates out for practice last night only five had any practical football experience. There is plenty of material for a good team among the men but it will take skillful coaching to develop it into a team and the pupils are confident that Coach Curtis will whip them into shape before the local clash with the Stoughton team on the twenty-seventh of this month.

Hemming shows ability as a booter getting his kicks off fairly fast and they travel a good distance. He has mastered the twisting of the ball making it difficult for men back for the punt to hold the ball. Hemming looks good for a backfield position and will make good if Coach Curtis can put more speed into him. If Dalton qualifies the stock of the eleven will be boosted by several notches as he is the best all around man in the high school at the present time, being a hard man to down in line plunging and open field running and a sure tackler. Atwood is looked upon to hold the other backfield position as he is a good runner but has had little experience on the gridiron. Dearborn is showing the best class of quarterback as he had a small amount of experience behind the line.

Poor tackling marred last evening's practice the men failing to dive at their opponents in time to make a clean tackle. Mooney and Lee showed ability at this end of the game and Mooney demonstrated his lack of fear. There are five heavy men including Jones, Schenk and Held who should be able to hold their own with the average high school line men if football is coached into them. There are several other promising men to come out next week when the scrimmaging starts and the prospects will be more hopeful.

ness all winter. Instead of hanging around pool rooms and cigar counters through the off season, Walter gets up to milk at a and studies out balanced rations for the cows. "I like the farm work and would rather be doing that than anything else," says Johnson. "A lot of ball players don't. But as soon as the baseball season is over I beat it for our farm out in Kansas and work like any of the other hands all the winter through. And when I get back to the farm I have an awful good time at just working hard from morning till night. I do more work before breakfast any day than most ball players do all the winter long. And the result is that when the spring training season arrives I'm feeling fit as a fiddle and the other boys have some twenty or thirty pounds of fat to remove, fat that has been gathered through hours of idleness. And, by golly, I wouldn't swap places with any of them either. I like the rural stuff."

In one respect at least the Central league ball season has recently come to a close was an unusual one. There wasn't one-tenth the rowdiness in the league this season that there has been in other days and Central league managers are congratulating one another on this. President Heilbruner made a few mistakes in the selection of umpires, but not very serious ones, and on the whole the work of the umpires was quite satisfactory. The Central league has previously been used to having from twenty to thirty new umpires every season and this year was a grand exception. Quite a few of the Central league owners have been able to sell promising talent to the big leagues and they have enjoyed a prosperous season. It is said to cost 30 per cent more to operate a team in the Central league today than it did ten years ago. The expense of the gray station has almost tripled itself in the past ten years and salaries have advanced a great deal.

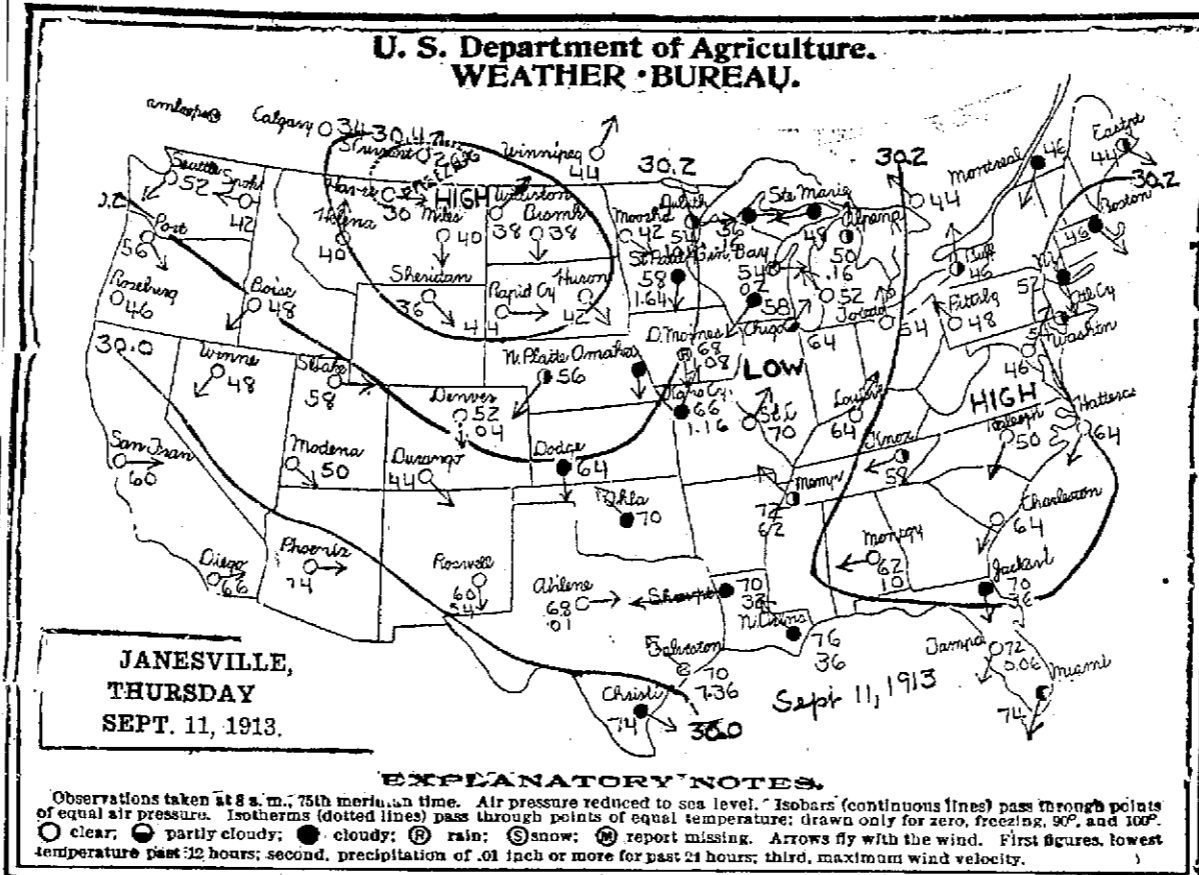

BATTLE HOT WHEN RAY MEETS WALTER

Football Prospects at High School Not Disheartening as Line Will Have Big Men.

The m-st successful pitcher against Walter Johnson in the American league is Ray Collins of the Boston Red Sox. Collins has met Johnson four times this year. Each has two games to his credit. Boston and Washington are booked for one more series this season. It falls in October, and Collins and Johnson are almost certain to clash in the rubber engagement.

Cheerfulness. Being cheerful makes life one long happy vacation.

September 11, 1913.—The trough of low pressure that was over the Missouri Valley yesterday, has now reached this vicinity in its eastward drift. It extends from the upper lake regions to Texas, and has been attended by rains throughout its extent. These rains were in many places unusually heavy. At Galveston 7.36 inches fell during the 24 hours ending at 7 a. m. and the following above 1.00 inches are also reported, at Duluth 1.04, St. Paul 1.64, Des Moines, 1.08; Kansas City 1.16. High barometer prevails in the East and in the West. The Western area is attended by cold weather in North Dakota, Wyoming and Montana, and the adjacent Canadian Provinces. Frost was reported in all of these states this morning, and a minimum temperature of 26° was recorded at Swift Current. In this vicinity the weather will clear this afternoon, and be fair to night and Friday. It will be cooler, with northerly winds.

PEACE PROPHECY.

Andrew Carnegie has just completed his gift of his million and a half peace palace at the Hague. The next thing is to find the dove of peace to inhabit it. However, Mr. Carnegie is not the first to attempt a world's peace and devote his energies to this end. According to the Christian Herald, two thousand years after the pyramids were erected, thirteen centuries before the birth of Christ, there came to the throne of Egypt the most interesting personality not only of that long line of shadowy Pharaohs, but of the ancient world. This great king was Akhnaton, "the first individual in human history, likewise the first of all founders of religious systems. He ranks as the world's first idealist, and his religious revolution introduces the study of advanced thought."

Akhnaton, when the reins of government fell to him, was barely eleven years of age. His mother, Queen Ty, acted as regent during his minority. He married Nefertiti, the eight-year-old daughter of the king of Mitanni, in Syria. The Pharaohs took to themselves many wives; we have no record that Akhnaton ever married but once.

That the overshadowing power of the priests might be diminished, his mother early determined to oppose cult against cult. Thus, at the very beginning of his life, Akhnaton's thoughts were directed toward the great religious strife. He thought much, observed closely, read widely; and, as a consequence, rejected root and branch the religion of his fathers and of his subjects. He saw visions and dreamed dreams. He tells us that to him alone did God reveal himself, and he always speaks of himself, and is spoken of, as the originator and teacher of the faith he now began slowly but surely to unfold.

Let us review in broad outline the salient features of his remarkable faith: for no such theology had ever appeared in the world before. Aton, the sun, or rather, "the heat which is in Aton," was the true god. He centered the eyes of his followers upon the sun's disc, and then taught them of that force which was the author of the dazzling orb, "the Lord of peace," utterly opposed to bloodshed and strife. "In an age of military renown, when the sword and buckler, the plumed helmet and shirt of mail glittered in every street and upon every highway," Akhnaton preached from a throne the doctrine of the brotherhood of man and dreamed of universal peace.

Akhnaton loved his wife and daughter with a tender, abiding affection, and endeavored to elevate the position of women and the sacredness of the family. Always in public the queen was at his side, and around his feet his children romped and played. Contrary to all precedent, his wife is represented in his reliefs as of the same size as himself.

Strenuous opposition to the new religion now penetrated to all classes and ranks. What counted a creed, what mattered all the gods when Egypt's proud empire was breaking up? Akhnaton saw before his eyes signs which could only be interpreted as pointing to his absolute undoing. The misery of failure was his, the blackness of despair, around him the darkness of coming death. His feeble frame was overwhelmed, and simultaneously with the fall of his empire, Akhnaton died. "Thus," writes the historian, "disappeared the most remarkable figure in early Oriental history; thus died such a spirit as the world had never seen before."

This, That and the Other. Lightning occasionally does a kind act and one which should be appreciated. Last Thursday there was a severe storm near Hickoryville and Angel Tansy, who lives out of town a short way, was sitting in the drawing room practicing on his slide trombone to the great discomfort of the neighbors who were suffering enough already with the heat. The storm came up suddenly and a bolt of lightning struck a maple tree in front of Mr. Tansy's house, bonked off and dodged into the front door. The bolt hastened through the house, yanked the slide trombone from Mr. Tansy's hands and smashed it into smithereens. Then the lightning dodged through the back door. Although we are not a great believer in signs, we would consider this as a distinct and timely warning to Mr. Tansy.

Once there was a man who was so afraid of thunder that he crawled into a hollow log. Then the rain poured down and the big log began to swell and the poor fellow was wedged in so tight he couldn't get out. All of his sins passed before him. Suddenly he remembered that he hadn't paid his subscription to the local paper and he felt so small that he was able to back right out.

The Ladies Agree. Those reformers who would remedy the immorality of the present age by forcing women to hide themselves under a blanket, instead of dressing as they please, are on a par with those who would insure good order by passing laws against the sale of weapons. They fail to consider the real causes of things.—Wausau Record-Herald.

Heart to Heart Talks.
By EDWIN A. NYE.

THE BACKWOODS JURY. Said young Beatty, the convicted Virginia wife murderer:

"A fellow is up against it when he has to be tried by a bunch of countrymen from the backwoods like those who tried me."

Continuing, he said: "They get married young, bring up big families and work about their farms. What do they know about how easy it is for a young fellow nowadays to get mixed up with a girl like Beulah Blinford?"

There are two types: One, the Beatty type of much money and little morals; the other, the "bunch of countrymen," honest, hard-working, God-fearing men who sat in that jury box.

These are as far removed from each other in thought, habit and feeling as the east is from the west.

The Beatty type has only contempt for the countrymen, while the latter has a disgust mingled with pity for the Beatty sort.

True, these sturdy farmers know little of the ways of the young sport who gets "mixed up" with a girl like Beulah Blinford," except by rumor.

These men of the countryside are men of clean lives and decent disposition.

It was this "bunch" that before and after voting their verdict got down on their knees and sought divine aid and sanction.

Do you know—Were I on trial for my life on evidence submitted to a jury I should want no better panel of my peers than the one that thus prayed for wisdom.

While such men would find no excuse for cold blooded murder in the revelation of the defendant's entanglement in the wiles of a modern Dulilah, you might be sure they would conscientiously weigh every scintilla of testimony pro and con.

Beatty's fling is a compliment. While these stern jurymen are not entirely ignorant of the mixed motives of the fast young man of today, he, on his part, is woefully ignorant of their spiritual strength and single virtues.

May their tribe increase! And by the same token give us fewer Beattys and Blinford.

Deaths by Drowning. As the result of old traditions there is in many places too ready acquiescence in the belief that a person who has been under water for five or ten minutes or even fifteen or twenty minutes is necessarily dead. There are well authenticated records of the resuscitation of persons who had been submerged for half an hour or even longer. Such cases occur particularly in women and children, in whom the fright at finding themselves in danger of drowning brings on a collapse or faint in which the heart and breathing stop and they sink, but low grade life processes continue for a considerable period. Strong men who have battled for their lives and then sunk are not so often revived, though if taken with a cramp they, too, may suffer from shock or fright with the resultant collapse that is apparently nature's method of giving the longest possible opportunity for life under these circumstances. In such cases efforts to revive the drowned person should not be abandoned until all chance of resuscitation is gone. Patients have been reported as not breathing for fifteen minutes to half an hour and yet they have been resuscitated.—Journal of American Medical Association.

Probably Oldest Name.
It is quite wrong to assume that the name Smith is derived from the fact that the original bearers were workers in metal. In reality, Smith is a very old name, far more ancient than Anglo-Saxon. The oldest known bearers of the name were brewers, and it was in use many thousands of years ago in mighty Egypt.

WORK WAS AWAITING DRUNKS GIVEN TERM

John Lee, Mike Stroh, and Carl Thurston Each Sentenced to Ten Days Under Commitment Law.
Work was awaiting John Lee, Mike Stroh, and Carl Thurston, sentenced by Judge Maxfield this morning to ten days at hard labor under the new commitment law, and as soon as possible they will be sent to the county prisoners. Lee had an alternative of paying a fine of $5 and costs and Stroh and Thurston could have obtained their liberty by paying a fine of $10 and costs, but none of the three had the necessary funds. New applications for prisoners' labor are constantly being received by Sheriff Whipple, the demand exceeding the supply. With the jail practically empty, the sheriff has nearly changed from that of a warden over prisoners to that of a superintendent of an employment agency.
Paul Moran, sentenced at Beloit to ninety days imprisonment on conviction of obtaining a bicycle, and brought to this city late Tuesday afternoon to serve his time, was returned to work at the Fairbanks-Morse factory under the commitment law within two hours afterward. His earnings will go to the support of his wife and children.
The commitment law does not specify that prisoners given work shall be paid a stipulated price, only stipulating that their earnings shall be turned over to those dependent upon them if there are such other wise to the county. Should there be rivalry for their services those who were willing to pay the most would probably secure them. The necessity of the county providing work for prisoners will probably become apparent in the winter when farmers need less help and little outside work can be done.
Close examination of the commitment law makes it plain that if the county does not provide work for prisoners, and the sheriff makes an unsuccessful attempt to find work for them, he will not be obliged to pay a dollar a day out of the county treasury for the support of those dependent upon them. Such payment is to be made only when the county provides employment.

Three men sentenced for drunkenness this morning were all taken to the employment of Asa R. R. None of them have anyone dependent upon them and they will get one-fourth time off for good behavior.

PRETTY WEDDING IS HELD AT SHOPIERE

Miss Florence Shimeall Becomes the Bride of Louis Cox on Wednesday Afternoon.

At four o'clock Wednesday afternoon at the home of the bride's parents near Shopiere, Miss Florence Grace Shimeall and Louis A. Cox were united in marriage. Just before the ceremony Miss Flossie Cox, sister of the groom, and Miss Promise Meade, and as the soft, sweet strains of the solo ceased she began playing Mendelssohn's wedding march. The couple took their places on the spacious porch, where in the presence of many of their guests assembled upon the lawn, the Rev. E. L. Jones read the marriage service.
The bride was attired in a simple white gown of Persian lawn trimmed with Irish point lace. The color scheme was green and white, white asters and southern snail being used in great profusion. The porch was banked in hyderangeas. The bride and groom were the recipients of many beautiful gifts. There were besides the relatives many guests present from Beloit, Janesville, Chicago and Rockford.
Immediately following the ceremony a five-course supper was served under the capable supervision of Mrs. Anna Black assisted by the following young ladies: The Misses Clara Lathers, Alice Murphy, Mildred Van Gilder, Flora Ponda, Marjorie McGluehlin, Lena Grossman, Eleanor Spicer, Lillian Shimeall.
Mrs. Cox is the oldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Shimeall and has lived near Shopiere all her life. She is a graduate of the Beloit high school, class of 1911, and has been for the past two years an efficient teacher in the district school. Mr. Cox is the oldest son of Mr. and Mrs. W. N. Cox and is one of the prosperous young farmers of Rock county and for the past eight years has resided on the Strong farm near Beloit.

Mr. and Mrs. Cox departed for an extended trip through the southern part of the state and will be at home to their many friends after Nov. 1. They will reside on the farm of the bride's father near Shopiere.

POOR FARM INMATE HELD FOR CHARGES

George Cotters Taken Into Custody This Afternoon—Accused of Drunkenness and Disorder.
George Cottes, a poor farm inmate, was taken into custody by the police this afternoon and will be brought before Judge Maxfield to answer a charge of being drunk and disorderly. Complaint was made to Sheriff Whipple by Mrs. Barless, wife of Capt. Robert Barless, that Cottes was very drunk, and he had used abusive language to her, and tried to cause a disturbance. On being taken to the poor farm, Cottes was reported to be a frequent trouble-maker at that place, someone smuggling liquor to him in violation of the poor farm regulations. He was sent to the poor farm from Beloit where he has a criminal court record. In 1909 he was sentenced to months imprisonment in the state's prison at Waupun.

BEGIN OVERHAULING FIRE ALARM SYSTEM

Chief Klein and His Men Carefully Going Over Entire System—String New Telegraph Wire.

Chief of the Fire Department H. C. Klein and his men have begun a thorough inspection and overhauling of the city's fire alarm telegraph system, and have begun at this work for about a week. Wires are being tightened up so as to remove all excess slack and prevent contact and short-circuits with other wire, defective crossarms replaced and all connections made sure. Approximately two miles of new wire will have to be put in.
Negotiations between the city and the Wisconsin Telephone Company are being conducted by which the former will obtain the right to lay its own conduits for fire and police alarm wires across the Milwaukee Street bridge alongside of those of the telephone company.
The city will also obtain the right to use the under-ground conduits, work at each end of the bridge. The conduits of the city will probably have ducts for not more than two cables.
The Rock County Telephone company is making good progress in laying its under-ground conduits. Work has been completed on Pleasant street, Park street, St. Lawrence avenue, and over a good part of Court street. The conduit, which comes in sections and contains six ducts, is laid in concrete, and concrete is also filled in around the joints. A protective coat is placed on the upper surface to prevent the conduit from being broken by picks or spades of workmen engaged in future street excavation.

RULES FOR BIRD PROTECTION FATHERED BY GOVERNMENT

Interest of Birds Rather Than Hunters Is Given First Consideration.

Spring Shooting Prohibited,
Also Night Slaughter While Feeding or Roosting.

LAST March a federal law was passed placing game and migratory birds under the protection of the department of agriculture and authorizing that department to form and publish such regulations as would assure the desired protection. The department has issued its rules and an explanation, so sportsmen need not go wrong.

Preparation of the regulations was entrusted to a committee of members of the biological survey appointed by the acting secretary of agriculture March 21, 1913. This committee consists of T. S. Palmer, assistant chief, chairman; A. K. Fisher, in charge of economic investigations, and W. W. Cooke, migratory expert. This committee went into the matter thoroughly, examined data on file, had maps prepared, collected special information and then made up their rules, which they duly reported to the secretary.

The committee went on the theory that regulatory laws heretofore enacted for the protection of game birds had provided long open seasons and had been favorable to hunters rather than to the birds. In the rules proposed the committee sought to reduce the open season to reasonable limits and to give the birds the benefit of the doubt. These regulations differ from the ordinary restrictions under state laws, since they take into consideration the entire range of the species and the condition of the birds at all times of the year, and not merely the local conditions when a certain species is most abundant in some particular state or region. The regulations will become operative on and after Oct. 1, 1913.

Birds Protected.

Regulation 1.—For the purpose of the regulations the following are considered migratory game birds:

- Anatidae or waterfowl, including brant, wild ducks, geese and swans.
- Gruidae or cranes, including little brown, sandhill and whooping cranes.
- Kallidae or rails, including coots, gallinules and sora and other rails.
- Limicolae or shore birds, including avocets, curlew, dowitchers, godwits, knots, oyster catchers, phalaropes, plovers, sandpipers, snipe, stilts, surf birds, turnstones, willet, woodcock and yellow legs.
- Columbidae or pigeons including doves and wild pigeons.

For the purposes of these regulations the following shall be considered migratory insectivorous birds:

- Bobolinks, catbirds, chickadees, cuckoos, flycatchers, grosbeaks, humming birds, kinglets, martins, meadow larks, night hawks or bull bats, nuthatches, orioles, robins, shrikes, swallows, swifts, tanager, titmice, thrushes, vireos, warblers, waxwings, whip-poor-wills, woodpeckers and wrens and all other perching birds which feed entirely or chiefly on insects.

Closed Seasons at Night.

Regulation 2.—A daily closed season on all migratory game and insectivorous birds shall extend from sunset to sunrise.

Regulation 3.—A closed season on migratory insectivorous birds shall continue to Dec. 31, 1913, and each year thereafter shall begin Jan. 1 and continue to Dec. 31, both dates inclusive, provided that nothing in this regulation shall be construed to prevent the issue of permits for collecting such birds for scientific purposes in accordance with the laws and regulations in force in the respective states and territories and the District of Columbia, and provided further that the closed season on shorebirds or rice-birds in Delaware, Maryland, the District of Columbia, Virginia and South Carolina shall begin Nov. 1 and end Aug. 31 next following both dates inclusive.

Five Year Closed Season.

Regulation 4.—A closed season shall continue until Sept. 1, 1918, on the following migratory game birds: Band-tailed pigeons, little brown, sand hill and whooping cranes, swans, curlew and all shore birds, except the black breasted and golden plover. Wilson or jack snipe, woodcock and the greater and the lesser yellow legs.

A closed season shall also continue until Sept. 1, 1918, on the wood duck in Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, Michigan, West Virginia and Wisconsin; on rail in California and Vermont and on woodcock in Illinois and Missouri.

Regulation 5.—A closed season shall continue between Jan. 1 and Oct. 31, both dates inclusive, of each year on all migratory birds passing over or at rest on any of the waters of the main stream of the following navigable rivers: The Mississippi river between New Orleans and Minneapolis; the Ohio river between its mouth and Pittsburgh and the Missouri river between its mouth and Bismarck, N. D.; and on the killing or capture of any such birds on or over the shores of any of said rivers or at any point within the limits aforesaid from any boat, raft or other device, floating or otherwise, in or on any such waters.

Regulation 6.—The following zones

Axiom.

The grade crossing and the automobile make an impossible combination, and the automobile cannot be abolished.—New York World.

states which now have no restrictions of this kind.

This regulation simply makes uniform the protection now accorded these birds in more than forty states. It protects the robin, the lark and other birds in the few states in which they suffer from an open season. It attempts no change in existing regulations regarding the issue of permits for collecting birds for scientific purposes.

Gives Greater Protection.

A closed season for several years is provided in an effort to harmonize the absolute protection already given some birds in certain states, the demand for five year closed seasons for shore birds and the necessity for greater protection for other birds which have been hunted beyond the margin of safety. The protection accorded woodcock and rail is already existing law; that on swans has been made uniform throughout all the states and that of woodcock extended from a few states in the northeast to most of the states in zone No. 1, east of the Mississippi river. The only important additions are the additional protection given band-tailed pigeons in a few states and the closed season placed on avocets, cranes, curlew, godwits, killdeer, stilts, upland plover, willet and the smaller shore birds.

The suspension for hunting on the Ohio, Mississippi and Missouri rivers allows waterfowl a safe highway from their winter feeding grounds in the lower Mississippi valley to their nesting grounds in Minnesota and the Dakotas and forms an extended refuge which is easily defined and can be generally recognized.

Only Two Zones.

More than fifty separate seasons for migratory birds were provided under statutes in force in 1912. This multiplicity of regulations or zones to suit special localities has apparently had anything but a beneficial effect on the abundance of game. The effort to provide special seasons for each kind of game in each locality merely makes a chain of open seasons for migratory birds and allows the continued destruction of such birds from the beginning of the first season to the close of the last. It is believed that better results will follow the adoption of the fewest possible number of zones and so regulating the seasons in each to include the time when such species is in the best condition or at the maximum of abundance during the autumn.

For this reason the country has been divided into two zones as nearly equal as possible, one to include the states in which migratory game birds breed or would breed if given reasonable protection, the other the states in which comparatively few species breed, but in which many winter. Within these zones the seasons are fixed for the principal natural groups—waterfowl, rail, shore birds and woodcock. In no case does the zone boundary cross a state line, and except in very rare cases the seasons are uniform throughout the states. Deviation from this rule leads ultimately to the recognition of a multiplicity of local seasons, which had done so much to retard game protection.

Seasons in Zone.

Apparently few changes have been made in existing hunting seasons in zone No. 1 except in the elimination of spring shooting, and about half of the states in this zone now close the season on water fowl by the middle of December or the first of January. In most states in this zone the hunting season begins on some date in September, and these dates have generally been followed in the regulations. In two or three cases in which states have several different seasons for different counties it has been necessary to effect a compromise either by adopting one season or the dates which most nearly conform with the seasons in adjoining states. A slight change in a few of the state laws would make it possible to eliminate most of the exceptions and apparent inequalities in the seasons.

In most cases the close seasons in zone No. 2 end on the same dates as the seasons under the state laws, but eliminate spring shooting after Jan. 15. This avoids confusion in the opening of the hunting season and provides shooting in the autumn or early winter, when the birds are in the best condition. In four states—Maryland, Virginia, North Carolina and South Carolina—the seasons for water fowl do not open until Nov. 1, and the season is consequently extended to Feb. 1. The difference of fifteen days in the length of the season in these states as compared with the seasons elsewhere is more than offset by the fact that the birds are present practically throughout the open season, whereas in the northern zone and in some states in the southern zone they are present only part of the time.

Provides For Hearings.

The object of hearings is to afford persons interested an opportunity to present evidence showing the necessity for readjustment of some of the seasons so as to adapt them better to local conditions and to submit new data regarding local abundance of birds and times of migration. The department already has ample information regarding the seasons provided under existing laws and the changes which have been made from time to time. The desire to have the hunting seasons as long as possible is natural, but as such seasons have heretofore been too long the question is merely one of adjustment within certain maximum limits.

Consequently, if the birds are to be restored, some curtailment of the season in each state is essential. In such an effort general welfare should take precedence over private interests.

POCKET FOR MAN'S HAT

Metal Receptacle Fits in Front of Crown, Over Forehead.

Women sometimes have pockets sewed inside their hats and gentlemen usually have their helmets rigged up with contrivances to hold cigars, cotton rattles and jewel boxes, but it remained for a Virginia man to devise a receptacle for use in the everyday straw hat of the everyday man. This receptacle is a curved metal box that fits inside the crown, in front, and is curved to fit over and around the wearer's forehead. Little spurs of straw and hold the box in place without damaging the hat in the slightest and it is the matter of a moment either to affix or to remove the receptacle. A blazer lid with a spring to it serves to keep the contents of the box inside and taking it all in all, a man should find many little uses for the device.

Golf Probably From Holland.

Golf is popularly supposed to have had its origin in Scotland, but there seems to be good reason for believing that it came from Holland. The name itself is undoubtedly of German or Dutch extraction, and an enactment of James I. of England, bearing date 1618, refers to a considerable importation of golf balls from Holland, and at the same time places a restriction upon this extravagant use, in a foreign country, of the coin of the realm.

Josephus Daniels, secretary of the navy, Cruiser West Virginia, and a group of marines.

Josephus Daniels, secretary of the navy, who has been promulgating so many reforms on the ships, faces an irritating little job of discipline following the attack of marines on halls of the Industrial Workers of the World at Seattle while he was dining on the West Virginia in the harbor and just after a speech in which he had denounced ultra radicalism.

At a banquet at the Rialler club in his honor, Secretary Daniels had spoken in tribute of the American flag and taken occasion to praise the attitude of the mayor of Boston who stopped a red flag parade.

"The red flag has no place in this country," he said, "and believers in it have no place in this country. A mayor who does not enforce the law against the red flag is not fit to hold office."

But word was passed about the city that the secretary had made a long address devoted to the two flags and had urged that all believers in the red flag be driven out of the country.

Policemen stood by grinning while marines tore down Socialistic banners, carried off furniture and generally smashed things up, aided by a big crowd of young men of the city.

STYLE NOTES ON Fall and Winter Garments

Tendencies that are Now in Evidence and are Used in Models for Fall Wear.

Dresses and Costumes

The natural figure line and consequently the close fitting lines of the dress are fundamental principles in the makeup of dresses and costumes for the Fall and Winter Season. Draperies and pleats, arranged in close swathing effects following the natural lines of the figure are shown on the skirts which are to continue narrow. Pleats and gathers appear at the waist line with a fullness falling gracefully at the knees. Sleeves are in both full length and three-quarter designs with a tendency to favor the long sleeves. The kimono sleeve is conspicuous in evening dresses.

Corsets

Busts of corsets, are lower, skirts are long, many models covering the hips completely but not to extreme length. The uncorseted effect is the keynote of the Fall modes. Models are designed to give free hip, flat back and slightly rounded abdomen with perfect freedom above the waist line.

Suits and Coats

High buttoning cutaway and blouse effects are popular in suits for Fall with the principal feature being the cutaway effect—the back being longer than the front. The suit coats measuring from finger tip to bend-of-knee length predominate.

COATS are 48 to 50 inches in length with high button collars and sloping back seams. The cut is irregular at the bottom, longer in the back than in the front. Wide belt effects below the waist line are popular as well as Mandarin sleeves and draped effects.

Fall Suitings

Bedford cords, eponge, wool jacquards and velour de laine are finding the bulk of favor while broadcloth is gaining in popularity rapidly. Bedford cords are taking the best in black, navy blue, medium blue, taupe and tan. Eponge is popular in plain and fancy weaves in both striped and checkered effects.

Correct the Habit Habit.

The surest way to bring on premature old age is to get into a rut. On the other hand, the surest way to avert old age is to get out of the rut. If you desire to keep young, do not make your habits hard and fast, or your arteries will likewise become so. Govern your habits; do not let them rule you. Just to show them that they do not, order them to break ranks from time to time.—Brain and Brawn.

Saving the Public Streets.

According to an excellent custom in Glasgow, before any street is paved or repaved all city departments that may be likely to open the street are communicated with so as to give them an opportunity to examine their pipes or make necessary repairs, alterations or renewals before the paving is laid.

Effect of Music on Animals.

A unique musical experience has been conducted recently in France. It was resolved to institute concerts for animals for the purpose of observing the effects of music upon them. The results of the observations made established the fact that disconnected tones on stringed instruments created no effect upon horses beyond causing some of the animals to manifest signs of impatience, but when a melody was played the horses turned toward the players, pricked up their ears and showed plainly the pleasure they experienced.

How Music Affected Animals.

An orchestral concert was given before the elephants in Le Jardin des Plantes, Paris. The animals became excited and impatient when passionate music was played, but calm when a sustained, melodious and flowing style was adopted.

THE RED BUTTON

By WILL IRWIN
Author of The City that Was, Etc.

We have taken little time to consider Betsy-Barbara. She has not yet now, as she stands, dressed in a blue frock for dinner, tapping at Constance's door. Betsy-Barbara, flesh and spirit were twenty-four; her heart was eighteen; her purpose was forty. In complexion, in such accessories of complexion as eyes and hair, in the hidden soul, she was a white creature, lightest. Whenever even the darkest blue touched her hair, it flickered with gold. In full sunshine, even her brows and lashes glittered and twinkled. Her mouth was large and generously irregular; her nose was small and whimsically irregular; her violet-blue eyes were as clear as pools. Why the regularity of a Greek statue may go with absolute ugliness, and why features which fail to match may produce real beauty, is a question too hard for you or me or any other connoisseur of beauty. Now Betsy-Barbara, with a mouth all too large and a nose all too small and a pair of eyes which could not be classified for course, expression, entered her room in equation with Betsy-Barbara. She was eternally assuming a schoolmistress sternness which made a piquant contrast with the fresh skin of her, the blue eyes of her, the little pop-corn teeth that made her half off half but, and when, in her schoolmistress solitude over her listener—as over a baby boy—she laughed, the world's whole movement was in her laughter. Betsy-Barbara had not really laughed for many days now. But she was young; the tides of life were flowing back. And as she stood there, waiting for Constance to rise and open the door, her argument took flame from some sleepy remark, the precise psychological moment, all planned by the latest Tommy North came down the hall on his way to dinner. The laugh arrested him dead. The rustle was on her hair so that it tumbled over her head. "Like a heap of pulled molasses candy," he told himself. The door opened then. She vanished like a golden fairy caught in a mist. A minute later Tommy North was sitting in the dining-room at Rosalie's right—waiting for something. He found himself in a state of embarrassment when he looked at her. What was it that he should talk to a decent girl? And would she know that he was the branded? But when, a moment later, she trailed in behind Constance like a luminous shadow, when Rosalie introduced them both by name, and when he recognized her as the woman in the Hanska affair, one part of his embarrassment floated away.

Indeed, Constance herself did the simply tactful thing by raising her hand to the matter at once. The other boarders had not yet come; they were alone with Rosalie.

"I am so glad," she said, "that they have finally left you off. Mr. North, nobody could have had any idea that you were guilty. It must have been a horrible experience." She stopped, and her eyes fixed on something across the room. "Horrible," she repeated.

"But everybody's going to get off easily, just as Mr. North did—you wait," said Betsy-Barbara, touching Tommy with a consoling little pat. Now the others were come, Miss Harding acknowledged Tommy and Betsy-Barbara with a lift of her eyes which said: "Well, you're out of your first scrape, aren't you? Miss Jones was plain in the trifling matter of this new wheat-and-oats compound prepared by Rosalie, showed Mr. North had been away at the fact that what they thought had now become a matter of entire indifference to Tommy North. The rest of the boarders put down his rapid silence to embarrassment over his late experience; and they left him out of the conversation. It was just as well. When Miss Harding remarked, "Wasn't that a terrible accident in the Bronx?" he would have answered had he been required to answer. "There are just the blue of periwinkles." When Professor Noll said in his heavy and formal way, "Yes, indeed—oh, yes, indeed," he would have said that the question—as a matter of fact it referred to the weather—had run through his mind a wonderful month. Twice he laughed uproariously, causing Miss Harding to remark that he was getting on his nerves, anyhow. This was when Betsy-Barbara ventured a mild joke. Twice again she laughed in the conversation. Once she asked the butler, which impelled him to react frantically for the salt, and once she referred to him in the question whether one could reach City Hall, Brooklyn, sooner by trolley or by subway, whereas he got temporarily reputation as a joker by answering "No, sir," and sat fazed through the soup, ecstatic through the roast, and rapt through the dessert.

When Betsy-Barbara and Constance had finished, did he remember that he had thought long ago. And then something happened which scattered the mist about him and brought him full into sunlight. Betsy-Barbara had turned at the door—turned back to asked.

"Mr. North," she said, "would it be possible for me to speak to you alone this evening? You see, she went on before he got tongue to reply, "both Mrs. Hanska and I are working as hard as we can on this case. Mrs. Hanska is almost prostrated by the dreadfulness of it all. I'm trying to spare her as much as possible. But thought I'd like to talk to you myself. Perhaps there's something—some tiny little thing that you'd never thought of before, which would make all the difference in the world. It might be the means of saving Lawrence Wade, for of course, he's innocent. I do hope you realize that, Mr. North. And I hope you'll help us in any way you can."

Now as to Mr. Wade, Tommy North held his own theories—or had up to this moment. Of course it was Wade, in his lonely and hysterical apprehensions at the Tomb, he had been forced to nail the crime to some other suspect in order to save his own reason. His mind had fastened like a hawk on Wade, especially after he had felt vaguely sorry, especially after his one sight of her. But this blue-and-gold elf had pronounced edict. To Tommy North, henceforth, Lawrence Wade was as innocent as the rational babe unborn.

"Of course he didn't do it," Tommy asserted valiantly. "I'll help all I can, I'm sure," he added. Then eager.

"The drawing-room is empty if you want to talk," said Rosalie from the door. She turned away with a smile on her lips and a glint in her eye. And Tommy sat down before his inquisitor. It was little he added to the evidence, but the countenance of Third Degree as he might. He could not but tell the story. Only one thing he evaded, dodged, eluded. It was a condition on that night. And suddenly Betsy-Barbara, in her best schoolmistress manner, came out with it.

"Now one other thing," she said, "beg your pardon for being so personal, but weren't you a little—little—little—She floundered for a word, and suddenly the whole face of her became a rose petal. "Only slightly I mean, of course—but weren't you a little—wasn't a little or even slightly," said Tommy, writhing in an agony of shame. "I was entirely."

For a second time that day, a woman looked on him with eyes of rebuke. Momentarily, Betsy-Barbara left the main track.

"And what did you do to it?" she inquired. "Not that it's my business, perhaps. I only wondered."

"I don't know," said Tommy. "I just kept on drinking until this was all over. I guess," he added suddenly, "there was nothing else to do. This came to him as a bright and perfect answer. He was totally unconscious that he had quoted Rosalie Le Grange.

Unaccountably Tommy North's tongue unlocked itself, what with the necessity of defending himself; and he talked.

"I can't spend the time," he said, "about it. That's all a woman knows about it. I can't spend the time about it. When the whistle blows, a man feels like doing something. I don't think I want to feel in a joint like this. Sometimes I want to get some fancy eats. So I percolate through Lobster Lane."

"Oh," exclaimed Betsy-Barbara, "what a quaint name!"

"I mean Lobster Lane," explained Tommy. "Well, I get a cocktail two or maybe three, according to who I meet. Then I eat—and drink—and when we beat it out on the Benzine Parkway."

"What a weird name!" commented Betsy-Barbara.

"Broadway again," said Tommy North, pausing only an instant. "And by that time, its all lighted up—and I'm lighted up, and we proceed down the Twinkling Trail."

"Broadway, I suppose," interpolated Betsy-Barbara.

"Route is another of its aliases," Tommy said. "The first thing I know its two-thirty a. m. and I'm in my room admiring my own imitation of a young gentleman of Gotham going to bed, a knockabout act solemnly enacted on any stage. But you needn't deliver that James B. Gough oration I see trembling on your lips. I don't need it. I've got mine all right. I've lost my job today on account of being entirely."

To Betsy-Barbara herself engaged in the economic struggle, this fact seemed more important than to Tommy.

"You have?" she exclaimed. "Oh, I'm so sorry! I've given up my position in Arden in order to be with Constance and I don't know how I shall live after three months. But some day you'll place me."

"Six months or so," replied Tommy. "That's all right. I can find another guess—or could if this hadn't got into the papers."

"Well, I'm sorry," said Betsy-Barbara, rising. "But such wonderful things happen to people in New York. Everybody's a Dick Whittington here. Only if I were you I wouldn't." She paused and looked at him very seriously.

"No," replied Tommy, docilely. "I won't." And his heart added, "Not till you're around." But his lips—Remember, if there is anything I can do."

"Oh, thank you!" replied Betsy-Barbara. "Good night!"

At the door of the dining-room next morning, Rosalie Le Grange met Mr. North.

"Thought my proposition over?" she asked.

"Yes, I guess I'll stay," replied Tommy, shortly.

"Thought you would," replied Rosalie. "And as she entered before him, she was smiling into the air. Dreading, she was enriching her life in these days with vicarious joys, but all the same with vicarious joys.

CHAPTER VI
Twin Stars.

ANOTHER week had passed, and the police still report "no progress" on the Wade-Hanska murder case, now a back number with the newspapers—a story laid aside. Wade, scowling, he says, all lawyer-tricks, innocent in the courts until the police shall have finished and turned the matter over to the merities of the Grand Jury. The week has been equally quiet at the select boarding-house maintained by Rosalie Le Grange—a quiet overlaid with gloom and yet illuminated with human sympathy and even gaiety. Gradually the household has become a roly of Wade partisans. That, although they know not, is due to Constance. Her son, her sweetest, which persisted even in her desperate situation, has moved them; and emotion has persuaded reason and opinion, as it always will until we become intellectual machines.

Out of the shadows twinkle two stars—Betsy-Barbara and Tommy North. Rosalie, in jest, and Tommy North, in earnest, call Betsy-Barbara "the little household fairy." Engaged though she is in a tragic guardianship, she is also young and sprightly and a village girl fresh to the wonder of New York. Rosalie is the quiet force, but Betsy-Barbara is the volatile focus, which draws them all together. Her nature, to their consideration of Manhattan all the small town intimacy of interest. She brings to their intercourse the country habit of asking help, and accepting kindnesses, the matter of course. She is a counsel of Miss Harding and Miss Jones on her autumn clothes. In her spare moments she news industriously with Rosalie Le Grange—drop by drop, she pours into those confidences which flow at sewing-machine, the speech of a country clergyman and a schoolmistress, she has at her finger-tips all the arts of play. Whenever the household starts in at nights, she gathers them together over hearts or bridge; when cards grow stale, she is capable of setting contagious fun out of charades or anagrams. She even starts experimenting with table-tipping—and wonders vaguely why Rosalie Le Grange seems uneasy when she finds that one of their sports alone and manages to break it up on the first excuse.

As for Tommy North, he assists. He is also in chief to this elfin princess. Also, he makes the most of his rabbits with which, at her suggestion, they finish off the card-parties.

"I appoint myself all-night chief to this establishment," said Tommy North, as he rolled up his sleeves on the first evening. "Is it possible that there is a hamlet in this happy country so remote that he fame of my Welsh rabbits has not reached it? I learned through toll and suffering—other people's. The first one I made is still hanging on the wall of the old farmhouse. After that, an automobile-man saw one of 'em. Great excitement. He thought the problem of the rubber tubs was solved. But he little recked. The tires made of 'em were all right as long as the auto kept running. But when it stopped out in the country, the field mice used to come in flocks and risk their lives to nibble the tires. No chemical combination they could ever discover made my Welsh-rabbit tires distasteful to the little creatures. I'm modest to show you the first I got from the St. Regis the other day."

More and more the boarders take to staying at home. This charming, modest, is a novelty in New York. Professor Noll enters in the fold, with the simple gaiety of a child. Two stenographers go out of evenings but rarely now. Their young entreat Rosalie (and perhaps) to furnish them with a car. "Your waiting list is going to make the Metropolitan Club look like the Ludlow Street Club," says Tommy North.

Mr. Estrilla has developed a way of joining them after his evening visits to his sister; and he brings such a spirit of Latin gaiety that they quit their formal games, and take always to musical and conversation when he enters. Rosalie especially delights in him. He has a quick turn of tongue which matches her own; and they engage with good-natured repartee. Whenever Estrilla enters the room his eyes travel to Betsy-Barbara and they two play in a boy-and-girl spirit very charming and amusing—to every one but Tommy North. "Yes," said Tommy North, "I guess he's a regular man. All right, if he is a wop," says even Tommy.

Through all the sprightly atmosphere Constance drifts, a figure quiet and dignified and beautiful and gentle—but cautious. Generally, she joins the parties in the large parlor. Betsy-Barbara sees to that. According to every desire, making no suggestions of her own, asking nothing, she is smiling visibly toward large of girth and has absolutely no melancholy. Days when she smiles a little, when faint stars gleam in her great eyes; then Betsy-Barbara knows, and the rest conjecture, that she is smiling toward a mountain her to a little hope. Nights when she holds in the game her eyes fix on some vision mid-air; then Betsy-Barbara knows, and the rest conjecture, that she has been visiting the judge. They get themselves to ex-ercise her demon, each other after this own fashion. Betsy-Barbara is judiciously cajoling, Rosalie subtly encouraging, Miss Harding heavy-handed, but cautious. Tommy North, for a moment, Professor Noll rather—but all are kind.

Miss Estrilla alone never joins the group down-stairs. Though her eyes are better, though she can bear some light, she shows a state of debility puzzling to her physician and alarming to her watcher and attendant, Rosalie Le Grange. The doctor advises her to return to a warmer climate before the New York winter sets in—like all transplanted Latins, she is a very shivery person. She answers that she can not; her brother's business lies in New York, and she would be unhappy without him. Once, Rosalie Le Grange suggests a hospital; whereupon Miss Estrilla weeps and begs to remain. Go she will not, though Rosalie, once discovers Estrilla arguing the question with her in his perfect English with its pleasant Spanish roll.

The time came when Rosalie Le Grange determined to visit Inspector McGee; she wished to unload some theories of her own concerning the Hanska case. Such visits must be made with all due precaution of secrecy. She chose an evening when, as happened seldom nowadays, nearly all the boarders had engagements elsewhere. Mr. Murphy and Mr. Dayne had invited the "girls" to the theater; Mr. North was to dine with a man who might give him a job. As a stop preliminary to her diplomatics, she telephoned to McGee and made with him an appointment far from the office. Then she approached Betsy-Barbara.

HEADLIGHT SIGNAL

Colored Slides Can Be Operated By Engineman in Cab.

At first glance it seems that the Wash-burn man who invented the headlight signal shown in this illustration had hit upon something of prime importance. Situated in the front of the headlight and just a little below it is a casing containing a series of colored glass slides. Air pressure from the engine operates the mechanism by means of a pump which the engineman, from his seat in the cab, can turn the rays of his headlight from white to red or green by merely propelling a red or green slide into the line of the engine's beam. The ability of the engineman to flash such signals at an instant's notice is far-reaching in its effects and only a railroad man can realize how important it is.

Dinner Stories

A small boy was seated in the parlor with his sister's young man. Being of an insatiable turn of mind, he asked Mr. Gaymuth:

"Do you weigh very much?"

"About 150 pounds, my little man," the hopeful lover responded.

"Do you think sister could lift you?" the boy continued.

"Oh, goodness, no!" said the young man, blushing at the mere thought. "But why do you ask?"

"I don't believe she can, either, but I heard her tell me this morning that she was going to throw you over as soon as she could."

Every employer under the Wisconsin Workmen's Compensation Act must carry insurance to cover his liability for compensation to which injured employees are entitled, unless, upon a showing of financial ability to pay all compensation claims, the Industrial Commission permits the employer to carry his own risk. A failure to comply with this law subjects the employer to a penalty of $25.00 a day.

The Company is the oldest company confining itself entirely to Compensation Insurance; has a larger Wisconsin premium income, has issued more policies, covers more lives, and has provided compensation for a greater number of industrial accidents in this State than any other company, and has saved its policyholders more than $325,000.00 in premiums during the past two years.

There is a lot of poppycock about this thing we call "inspiration." Men do not sit down in a trance and arise to find themselves equipped with genius. Achievement means toil and struggle and continuous effort to master small things that eventually shall contribute to the perfect whole.
